2019

year in review

Mercer Island, central to the Seattle-Eastside region, saw slight price softening in 2019 as compared to 2018. With a 2.4% dip, median sale prices fared better than in Seattle (down 3.9%) but slightly worse than the Eastside as a whole (only down 1%).

A total of 299 homes changed hands in 2019, according to Northwest Multiple Listing Service. The highest Mercer Island sale was a $10,050,000 waterfront home on the North End. The lowest was a $685,000 West Mercer Way rambler in need of a major renovation or complete rebuild.

In 2019, 39.8% of all homes sold at or above their listed price. In contrast, only 12.7% of luxury homes priced above two million dollars sold for full price.

Well-priced homes in move-in ready condition—with good lighting and access, and with functional floor plans—commanded the most attention from market-savvy buyers hoping to make a good investment in the place they would call home.
